SELF-HELP FOR MEXICO?

Brutal wrongdoings, of importance which results in the general loosening of the ties of civilized society may finally require intervention by some civilized nation and in the western hemisphere the United States cannot ignore its duty," said Theodore Roosevelt in 1904.

The repeated offenses against American nationals which have been recorded in Mexico during the past few years and which are recalled by the recent kidnapping of Bielaski and 40 others, furnish evidence enough of the impotence of previous Mexican governments. If the Obregon government can meet the situation raised by this most recent affront to American sovereignty it will do much to redress the testimony as to its impotence. If it can not, or refuses to attempt to do so, the American government will be justified in resorting to drastic action to redress the policy of check turning which characterized the Wilson administration and the ended one and for all. That the "watchful waiting" policy has about reached the end of its tether is indicated by the prompt action of the state department in communicating with Obregon.

In accordance with the principles of international law," says Dr. Elihu Root, in his admirable volume recently published, entitled "International Law," every state is required to police its own territory in such a manner as to secure for all its inhabitants, and nationals as well as aliens, a reasonable protection and the enjoyment of a minimum of rights recognized by that law as absolutely indispensable for all civilized human beings. The failure to meet this obligation is a delinquency which justifies intervention to secure redress.

And under the subtitle of "Self Help," the author says: "If some times harassed government is unable or unwilling to compel its nationals to observe the international law, action so taken is called 'self help' and is a remedy which supplements interposition."

The annals of international relations are replete with instances of self help. When the government of Argentina failed to impose upon the inhabitants of the Falkland islands a proper respect for the rights of American whalers requiring further, the government of the United States had recourse to self help and administered directly a well merited punishment. "The right of the government to intervene for the protection of its citizens in foreign lands and on the high seas never was doubted; nor was such action withheld in proper cases," says John Bassett

Moose, one of the foremost American authorities on international law. And Elihu Root, speaking of that general standard which forms a part of the international law of the world, says: "If any country's system of law and administration does not conform to that standard, although the people of the country may be content or compelled to live under it, no other country can be compelled to accept it as furnishing a satisfactory measure of treatment to its citizens."

The capture and holding for ransom of Bielaski within 50 miles of the Mexican capital is indicative of the impotence of the Obregon government. Will that government disprove the evidence? If it does not, the state department may be depended upon to meet the situation in a manner conformable with the dignity of this nation.

A GOOD BUY

Nobody need hesitate in choosing safe investments these days. The United States government will take your money and pay you 4 1/2 percent interest on it to the past-due and pay $20, $50 or $100 for a treasury savings certificate. In five years it can be redeemed for $25, $100 or $500.

DISMAL DAVE

Senator David Walsh, democrat of Massachusetts, characterizes the tariff bill as a "monstrosity without precedent." This is the same senator who recently publicly advised college men against entering upon a political career. Does he think a tariff bill prepared by men of high school education would be an improvement over the present measure?

OFF TO A BAD START

The conference at The Hague appears to have been wrecked even before they were fairly under way. The Russians insist that the question of credits for Russia be first discussed after which they are willing to talk about debts and the rights of private property. That practically means that Russia demands a substantial loan and after it is granted she will consider the matter of security. Of course such a sequence of subjects is impossible, and The Hague meeting is doomed to follow the Geneva parley to disaster unless wiser counsels prevail.

The railroads have purchased about 80,000 new freight cars in the first five months of this year which is about three times the number bought during the whole of 1921. It was the certain prospect of increased business and general prosperity that dictated those investments.

BRITAIN PERTURBED

Dispatches from London are to the effect that the American ship subsidy bill, now pending in congress, is causing "grave perturbation" in British shipping circles. This is good news and if any additional testimony was needed as to the soundness of that measure it is furnished in the London report. The law was drafted to strike consternation into the hearts of British shipping, and we are glad it is achieving its purpose. It is the intent of American ship operators to capture as much of the British carrying trade as they can and with the assistance given by the subsidy bill they are confident the relative positions of the United States and Great Britain on the seas will be speedily reversed.

KEEP THEM OUT

There is plenty of criticism of the present immigration law, but the simple fact is that it keeps them out. The closer we draw the restrictions around the admission of aliens the more frequent will be the complaints against alleged injustice to would be immigrants. It is safe to say that no immigration law that can be devised will work with satisfaction to all. The present act sets an arbitrary figure for each country beyond which the number of immigrants in any one year cannot go. It operates as a pretty effective barrier.
